39 & 41 PEACHTREE STREET

December with its chilling winds is near at hand, and we propose to put it in the power of all classes and conditions of people to be warmly clad, if cheap cassimines, cloth jeans, etc., will effect that purpose.

We have in stock a good well filling flannel in gray and brown,

12 1/2 cents per yard, well worth 20 cents; all wool flannel suitings at 35 cents, not to be matched in the city for less than 40c.

The cry is "still they come," and we are in condition to meet the large demand for our 54 inch all wool filling water proof at 35c per yard.

Nothing like them in the market.

Now for blankets. We bought them in case lots. We thereby secured all the advantages to be had,

and we feel assured that we are under the mark of all competition.

In this department we have blankets at $1, $1.25, $1.50, $2, $2.50 per pair, and if none of these are fine enough for you, we have them in all prices up to the very best goods made.

Come and get our prices, and we have no fear as to the result.

Our cloak department looks as if a cyclone had swept the goods out of the house, but we could not prevent the run of sales, for we marked them to sell and they went.

They are however receiving fresh goods every day, and hope to be able to meet the demands made on us during the present week. Another invoice Jersey jackets just received. They are good goods, and the prices are just too taking.

MONEY TO BE PAID.

The Gentleman With a Fading Name, a Story in Sepia."

WRITTEN BY CHARLOTTE DUNNING.

It was neither prying curiosity nor an eye for silver folks that drew him so near the window. He was a homeless man indeed, but not a vagabond. Business had brought him to Pillowville, and after eating supper in the tavern he had wandered about the drowsy streets of the town, until, through the window of a low-set, modest dwelling, he caught a glimpse of a group around a table. At the table sat a pretty girl who was evidently affording excellent entertainment to an elderly woman, an old man and a gawk of a boy.

Although the gentleman without could not hear the words she spoke, he could well see the faces of those who listened to her with fond eagerness. She was telling a story, gesticulating in a graceful fashion, and turning her head from side to side like a bird. The old man, who had a flowing white beard, leaned toward her, putting his open hand behind his ear so that he should not lose a syllable of her sprightly talk, and the gentleman outside stepped on the porch to better see the girl's winsome face. The gawk of a boy began to grin, displaying large teeth stranded on a reef of red gums; the old man lay back in his chair in exquisite delight, and the elderly woman laughed so that her ample bosom shook. She was very fat, and she pressed her hand to her sides though it ached from two much mirth. Suddenly she rose, and before the gentleman on the porch could beat a retreat, she had opened the door.

"I thought I heard somebody here," she said with great good humor. "The bell is a little out of order, and it don't ring first rate. Who are you? I want to see you." The unknown visitor, who did not lack audacity, asked if Mr. Brown lived there, and the woman answered that he did. "But do you mean Mr. Hughson Brown or Mr. Ferry Brown?" she added.

"Neither, Mr. Henry Brown," he answered promptly.

The woman clasped her hands. "Why, here's he, but Ferry, that's his brother, lives here and he'll be real glad to see you. Come right in."

"No, it is of no consequence," he said.

"Do come in and see Ferry," she said, smilingly.

"But don't you let on that you notice it. Talk good and loud and you'll be all right. He will be up to being deaf. Come right in."

He entered, and was White in New York, an instant afterwards.

"Henry Brown is dead," Mr. Gray White continued, taking no notice of this, "and his daughter is penniless. If you want me to send her a check tomorrow for the $4,000 a year, and the interest, and that her father lent her, you will want to see her."

"Shew! and are you her counselor? Is she fair to look upon this dead man's daughter?"

"It is of no consequence whether she is fair or plain; it is of consequence whether you are or not."

"Good-morning to you Mr. White."

The gentleman with the fading name shrugged his shoulders.

"Please, have a pretty dish to set before the queen," he said.

He was about to leave, but he was called back.

"Ah, hold on, Don Quixote, what the due de dia is it?" You patience on me and about me here the day out, but I'll be off now and get round about."

The old man rose and held out a thin, large, yellow hand.

"I didn't quite catch the color of your name, sir," he said, jocosely.

"Gray," was the faltering response, given with a helpless smile.

And then the old man chuckled. "Taint so good being a nobleman, but I can't afford to be in the drygoods line myself. Well, here is Mrs. Brown and our son Henry—named for his uncle—and our niece, Miss Hattie Brown."

The gentleman with the fading name bowed politely and accepted the chair the hostess offered. She was the soul of hospitality; she invited him to take a cup of tea and some bread and butter, and lamented that the steamed pie and smoked beef were all eaten up, diverging a little to dwell on her son's appetite, and the old man looked abjectly miserable, and was probably the reason why the stranger curiously, at the gawk of a boy stared and the old man put on a pair of spectacles.

"Pa," said the elderly woman, in a shrill voice, "here's a gentleman come to see poor brother Henry, not knowing he was dead."

The old man rose and held out a thin, large, yellow hand.

"I didn't quite catch the color of your name, sir," he said, jocosely.

"Gray," was the faltering response, given with a helpless smile.

And then the old man chuckled. "Taint so good being a nobleman, but I can't afford to be in the drygoods line myself. Well, here is Mrs. Brown and our son Henry—named for his uncle—and our niece, Miss Hattie Brown."

The gentleman with the fading name bowed politely and accepted the chair the hostess offered. She was the soul of hospitality;

she invited him to take a cup of tea and some bread and butter, and lamented that the steamed pie and smoked beef were all eaten up, diverging a little to dwell on her son's appetite, and the old man looked abjectly miserable, and was probably the reason why the stranger curiously, at the gawk of a boy stared and the old man put on a pair of spectacles.

"So you knew Henry," said old Mr. Brown, reflectively. "Out west, I guess. Leadville, likely, where you have anything to do with the Maria mine?"

Mr. Gray's face brightened, then clouded over.

"Did, indeed," he answered.

"I'll bet a copper," cried Mr. Brown in glee. "Henry isn't a bad sort, but he died in the death of him, too. He didn't owe you anything?" he added, with an anxious pucker of his wrinkled face.

"Don't mix me into the gushing epistles," he said; "bear that in mind."

"Oh, I won't, since you make such a point of it. But don't you forget that I always meant to pay you money, only I had rather lost sight of Brown."

"We have all lost sight of him," echoed Mr. Gray. "With a roar of laughter.

Then he sauntered away alone and entered a fashionable club, where he strolled blankly out of mind, and did not return until the morning.

"Morning, White. Saw you breakfasting with Hallow. I hear he's going to marry Jim Morton's widow. A far-away cousin of ours, is it?"

"Yes, and a deal too good for him."

"Old Tom Hallow isn't a bad sort, and he is going to like a racket. Wonder if he'll get into the club?"

"Duce knows."

"Then you're the deuce," the acquaintance retorted. "You are on the committee."

"He will get in if I am of any mortal use," said the old man, reflectively.

"There is a queer streak in all these Greeneville Whitemen," his quondam companion remarked to a bystander.

"An uncommonly white streak," was the wretched reply.

"They were mostly white, but they were black."

"Four years next month," but it was the girl softly. She was helping her aunt to clear the table, and the stranger's eyes followed her trim figure as it flitted to and from a cupboard.

"Did you have anything in particular to say to Mrs. Hattie?" Mrs. Brown asked, pausing with a salt cellar in one hand, a vinegar cruet in the other.

"No, I happened to be here, and I thought I would look him up. I had—rather lost sight of him."

"We have all lost sight of him," said the old man solemnly. "But I guess I'll be here long. I am most 80, sir."

"Now, I don't you begin such talk," broke in his wife.

"I am just sitting here waiting for death, Elizabeth, and there is no use trying to get around it. I ain't so plumb as to want to be an angel right off," he added, with a twinkle in his eyes; "and I never was much of a hand to muscle, so I don't care how I'll manage a hand to you. I used to use the date when I was young. I hate the hell out of training. She sings in the choir already; and Henry, he's practicing on the mouth organ. In days you prepare for death. Pity I give up the pipe."

Mr. Gray seemed at a loss for words. The young girl's face turned to him and said:

"I had not seen my father for a year before he died, and he died away from home. Tell me something about him."

A flush of shame flamed up in the gentleman's face as he looked into her beseeching eyes.

"I don't know what to tell you," he said gently.

"Well, Henry wasn't a lawyer, but he was pretty much everything else," he added, with a twinkle in his eyes; "and I never was much of a hand to muscle, so I don't care how I'll manage a hand to you. I used to use the date when I was young. I hate the hell out of training. She sings in the choir already; and Henry, he's practicing on the mouth organ. In days you prepare for death. Pity I give up the pipe."

"Oh, a lawyer," Mr. Brown stroked his beard. "Henry wasn't a lawyer, but he was pretty much everything else," he added, with a twinkle in his eyes; "and I never was much of a hand to muscle, so I don't care how I'll manage a hand to you. I used to use the date when I was young. I hate the hell out of training. She sings in the choir already; and Henry, he's practicing on the mouth organ. In days you prepare for death. THE NEWS IN MACON.

RECORD OF YESTERDAY'S EVENTS
IN THE CENTRAL CITY.A Conductor While Assisting to Shoot a Passenger for Refusing to Pay His Fare Is Considerably
Wounded. A Runaway Horse—Mortuary
Report—Personal Mention.MACON, November 14.—[Special.]—A few days ago Captain F. B. Young, late car agent of the Central railroad, was seriously injured in a dilligation accident. He was a passenger on a train which the conductor was making an effort to stop a man who had refused to pay his fare. Captain Young, having once been a conductor and appreciating the situation, attempted to assist in the ejection, when the passenger knocked him down and injured him so seriously that he is now confined to his bed in Savannah. Captain Young was for a long while a conductor between Macon and Atlanta, and has many friends who will regret to learn of his injury.

MORTUARY REPORT.

MACON, November 14.—[Special.]—For the week ending today the records of the city sexton show that seven deaths have occurred in the city. Two of these died from old age, one from pneumonia, one from carbuncle, one from whooping cough, one of a heart attack, and one from the grippe. The mortality in Macon is less in proportion to population than any other southern city. This pleasant climate, the good water supply, the fine drainage, and the excellent water, of which there is an abundant supply for sanitary and domestic uses, are clear crystal and perfectly pure.

DR. FORD'S HORSES AWAY.

MACON, November 14.—[Special.]—This morning while Dr. Ford's horse and buggy were standing in front of the city hall the animal became frightened at a passing vehicle and ran away. The conductors of the cars stopped him, but the horses were thrown out but was not much injured. The horses ran under the wooden swing in front of Mr. Russell's store, on Cotton avenue, where he broke up the buggy and knocked down several posts.

NOTICE TO MORTUARIES.

MACON, November 14.—[Special.]—The brick to be used in the foundation for the iron fence around the Wadley monument have been hauled to the spot, and the work will begin on Monday.

The Phil Delta Theta reading club held a vespers meeting last night at the residence of Mr. E. W. Johnson, 100 Peachtree street.

Mrs. O. M. Ryndquist and master Randal Ryndquist of Alpine, Alabama, after spending several days in the city, have returned home going via Atlanta.

Miss Anna Pachal of Geneva, visiting the city. Until she was over sixty years old she was a bachelor, and a man of solitary habits. He seldom went to Sparta, and the chief break in the monotony of his life was his annual visit to Augustus. He attended regularly the Georgia railroad conventions in that city, because he was one of the earliest subscribers to that road and one of the largest stockholders in it.

In 1870 he married Miss Clara Harris of this county. She lived as his wife for about two years and died childless. Mr. Dickson had decided to herself and her mother a handsome property before his death. They had been slaves of his and had lived on his plantation for many years under circumstances which did not elevate Mr. Dickson's social standing, or exact the regard in which his neighbors held him. He lived twelve miles from Sparta in about 600 acres of land.

What are the special points of your fence?

In the first place, it is the only practical wire fence ever invented, it is a metal and dangerous fence to use. In warm weather it expands and becomes loose and slack, so that any animal can get through it.

Mr. F. E. Logan, manager of the Georgia fence company, said that the fence had been done in ten years. It settles the fence question, and is being adopted with a rapidity that will surprise you.

The success which has attended our fence is not astonishing, when the merits of the fence is considered. Come to us for a free estimate.

CONSTITUTIONALS.

General Gossip and Editorial Short Stop.
Cries on the Run.
I take the suggestions of two travelers as a topic for this morning. Mr. George F. Boiles, lately returned from an extended trip through the extreme northwest, reaching to Canada. He says: "As soon as I registered at a hotel, from Atlanta, Ga., strangers began to send in their cards, and inquire about the south. They want to come down here to live. All classes, and especially the Germans and English, were anxious to get into a more temperate climate. There are tens of thousands of good men in Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin and Dakota, who would make their homes in the south, if they could only get reliable information on which to base their change."

"About the first thing I said was: 'I'm winter-killed, and I want to go home where there is something less than nine inches of snow!' The severity of the winter climate in the far northwest can be faintly understood in its temperate climate. The drifts of snow seem to be eternal. There are three or four months in every year when travel and everything else is blocked up. I was in a hotel in Detroit in which the water pipes had been cut in eighteen months."

"Is the soil richer there than in Georgia?"

"Indeed. But fertilizers make crops on the land. But the extra fertility of Dakota soil does not account for much, when the farmer has only a month or two in which to make his crops, and when every animal on his farm has to be housed and fed nine months in the twelve."

"I lived in Dacota fourteen years, and since I have lived in West End for five years, it seems incredible that any man who knows the difference between the sections can choose the bleaker one for a home. The fear of the south is the deepest Dakota than in middle Georgia. I never suffered from the heat as much in Georgia as in Minnesota, and the high table lands and hills of Atlanta have the best climate on the continent. The high cost of Atlanta and its adjacency insures bumper summers and cool nights, while its southern location tempts in winters."

"Will there be much immigration to this section from the Northwest?"

"Unquestionably. It is simply a question of finding out. Sectional prejudice has kept northern men from exploring to the southward, and partisan newspapers have kept them misinformed. The south has made the mistake of spending its resources in trying to induce foreign immigration. Her best field is the northwest, with its rapidly disappearing forests and its increasing cold. There are thousands of thrifty German and Englishmen and westerners who are dissatisfied, and who are spying out new homes in more temperate climates. The south will get a large share of these."

The excursions now being organized in the northwest and Mr. Fontaine's excursionists now in Georgia are movements in the direction suggested by Mr. Boiles, the outcome of which will be watched with interest.

Mr. Charley Howell lately made a trip through Ohio and Indiana, and reports an experience that will be appreciated. He says: "The day I spent in Cincinnati was the first day I ever passed without meeting somebody I knew. The loneliness of the place was described.

All day long I had not shaken hands with any person to a human being. Suddenly I saw a Chinaman scudding along the sidewalk. I thought I recognized Chung Lee, who used to stay here. I ran after him and caught him by the hand: 'How are you, Chung?' 'Me no know you!' 'Look here, Chung, don't you givin' back on me!' 'No know you!' And off he was gone, before I time to remember that all Chinamen look alike."

"There was a curious thing I noticed about the negroes up there. They are a great many of them, and most of them as draymen, car-drivers, or mechanics. I never even saw one handling a shovel or a pick. They are shut out from all this sort of thing and confined to waiting about hotels and picking up odd jobs as errand boys, or boat-hands. Every revenue of honest and serious labor was barred to them. In the south, white and black carpenters work side by side—white and black hackmen drive side by side. I never saw this at the north, and yet we are charged with discriminating against the negro."

Mr. Howell said further: "I rode through the entire state of Indiana, a whole day of homes and fields and forests and never saw a dog. I don't say there were no dogs in the state, but I never saw one. It was certainly a great contrast to the Georgia cabin, about every one of which you find a pack of dogs."

While in Minneapolis, Mr. Howell went out to a camp of the Grand Army of the Republic, searching for the captain of an Indiana company who had captured him during the war. He says: "As soon as it was known I was an ex-rebel I was taken hold of by a thousand old soldiers. Nothing was too good for me." They kept me several days and when I had accepted all the invitations I got, I would have been there yet. There may be sectional feeling among the politicians of the north, but there certainly is none among the old soldiers."

Sam Jones' "turn" story is told at the Methodist church, Friday night is as follows: "There was a married couple with half a dozen children and only one bed. The whole family slept on the bed—and were so thick that one couldn't turn over unless all did. So when anyone got tired sleeping on one side he'd say, 'Turn'—and over the whole family went. The got used to it, that even when they heard the word 'turn' in their sleep they turned under the bed. One day the old man was fishing on a log bridge over the river. The sun was hot and the fish wasn't biting, and he fell asleep balanced on the log. One of the boys saw him and thought he would try a joke, and he laid low out 'Turn.' Over the old man went head first into the water. How I want the temperature men to hollow 'turn' until the ants move when they are asleep on the bridge over the prohibition river will hear it and drop in."

In closing his sermon, Mr. Jones said: "It is getting late, and this church is rather too cold for a probation meeting."

The articles in THE CONSTITUTION on the subject of a bottle factory in Atlanta, have attracted the attention of several northern manufacturers, and the necessary capital already secured. Various sand is now being prospected for, and when found, will be utilized.

The registration that closed last night has resulted in 2,000 bonded voters, who had allowed their names to appear for several years, and were rapidly drifting into permanent disaffection. Their arrears having been paid up to date, it cost only a dollar to renew them annually, and candidates will always be found ready to advance this much.

Constant Depredations Made Upon Colonial Black's Stamp Drawer.

For several weeks past Mr. Black, the general freight agent of the Western and Atlantic railroad, has been making postage stamps. He reported that time fully twenty dollars worth of stamps have disappeared.

Soon after the first batch of stamps evaporated, Mr. Black became satisfied that a thief was working his stamp drawers. Several traps were set to catch the guilty person but without success. Finally, Mr. Black reported to the master at the police headquarters and asked for assistance. Chief Connolly detailed a detective to work the case, but the detective had no better success than Mr. Black.

Several days ago a new supply of stamps was purchased, and before they were put in the drawer one of the clerks put a private mark on the back of each stamp. The mark was so small that a casual observer would not see it, and yet to place it it could be seen by any one who looked out. This mark yesterday led to the arrest of the thief.

Mr. Percy Stevens left last night for Cincinnati, where he will attend the manufacture of furniture for his new jewelry house on Whitehall street. Mr. Stevens has in store for Atlantians the neatest thing out. Mr. Frank, the well known decorator and paper hanger, assisted by other Atlanta gentlemen of that profession, is engaged in the decorations for the new house. The decorations will be made especially for the house, and the furniture will be made to order. Everything will work toward a common end—beauty and harmony. It will be a masterpiece.

The officers on West End avenue, Ashby street, and North Lee street have had the grades of those streets fixed with a view to entering into a co-operative scheme, and the roads are now perfectly graded, and have substantial sidewalks laid.

Mr. Jonathan Norcross is grading his land on corner Lee street and West End avenue. When finished he will have a number of handsome residence lots for sale.

"The Dixies," of Chattanooga, and the "Alphas," of Atlanta, was played yesterday at the skating rink yesterday afternoon. It resulted in an enthusiastic defeat for the Chattanooga boys.

The "Dixies" were playing in the light in the presence of a fine crowd. The Chattanooga players with great vim and seemed determined to win, but they went down again before the Atlanta team.

The "Dixies" made a good impression in Atlanta, both by their fine playing and their generally deportment. They left for home last evening.

ONE BILLION DOLLARS IN GOLD.

Miss Turner gave Sullivan's "I will dream again" with clear enunciation and correct intonation. Her voice is full of musical distinctness and intelligence, as to make a decided impression upon the audience. Boston Advertiser.

"Miss M. E. Turner certainly deserves praise for her singing. One cannot hear her without being struck by the quality of her voice and its natural resources. Her manner is simple and she sings with taste and expression. Her voice is strong and clear, and very even throughout the registers. Inter-Ocean.

Grand Mass Meeting of the Citizens of Jonesboro, November 13, 1885, at the Court House—The Jonesboro News Subsisted.

JONESBORO, Ga., November 13.—President W. A. Melton was called to the chair. W. T. King was requested to act as secretary. On motion of Mr. M. B. Williams, Mr. E. M. Blacklock explained the object of the meeting. Enthusiastic speeches were made by several gentlemen vindicating our Constitution of 1865 instant, by affidavit of some people present by Mr. W. G. Gay, who was expressing his good will to the public in this city. Mr. J. J. Vaughn, whose affidavit appears in the Atlanta Constitution, was present and pointedly said that he did not intend to let the state of Georgia be represented as depreciated in value by prohibition; that he owns no property in Jonesboro, but was in possession of a large amount of property in Atlanta, and that he was induced and induced to sign said affidavit at the request of Mr. W. W. Gay, who was a personal benefit, as he (Gay) was to receive a large sum of money for what he was doing, and that he positively should not go to the public, otherwise he would not have signed it. In regard to business men we are told that he had signed it, but that business (being a showman) was not so good as several years ago, but does not attribute it to prohibition.

On motion of Mr. J. O. Hightower, the following gentlemen were appointed as a committee (the wits): Mr. Blacklock, W. B. Stewart, W. W. Waterson, J. O. Hightower, Dr. D. C. Dowd, W. T. King, Mr. —, and the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted by a ringing vote:

We are asked to respectably adopt the following resolutions:

Resolved, First, that the gentlemen over the signature of Mr. W. W. Gay, in the Atlanta Constitution, should in a series of misstatements and false allegations in a manner only commensurate with the corporate cause which he has assumed to claim.

2. That the charges and allegations in his communication should not stand, and that they be withdrawn.

3. That the present prohibition has injured Jonesboro. Not true that property has depreciated in value. Not true that there are vacant business houses, as alleged. In short, there is not a material fact stated correctly.

As to the statement of Mr. H. Gay, that he gave in his lands unto oats tax base, we say that he did not do so, and give it in under prohibition laws at $17,750, and that he gave it under oats base him to the tax man's club, and meet them Monday at 6 p.m., and help escort the speakers to the tent.

[Communicated.] PROHIBITION ITEMS.

Telegram From New York.
The following was sent yesterday:

New York, November 14, 1885.—Dr. T. W. Trower, Editor Temperance Advocate.—Accept congratulations of New York prohibitionists for your bold energy and enthusiasm or prohibition, with particular reference to the work you are doing.

Will you kindly send us a copy of your paper?

W. JENNINGS DEMORET, [Communicated.]
A Correction.

In a foot note to a letter addressed by W. H. Davis, of Athens, to W. A. Pledger, we are told that Mr. Davis had been expelled from the Atlanta university on account of drunkenness.

We insist, and it is the voice of this meeting, that Mr. Davis is innocent of醉酒; that our people are much pleased with it; that under no circumstances would we wish him that; that he is in a position to do better; that there is no better; that there is no depreciation, and a willful desire to misrepresent and pervert the truth.

As to the statement of Mr. H. Gay, that we find from the tax books that Mr. Fuller gives in his lands for oats tax base him to the tax man's club, in which he was interested as partner in a barroom.

9. Last, we send greeting to the people of Atlanta and the surrounding country, and assure them that they have deserved, and earnestly wish that they may succeed in driving the monster from the land of space.

The above resolutions unanimously adopted.

W. A. MILLON, chairman.

AFFIDAVITS OF CITIZENS OF JONESBORO.

We print below only those made by J. J. Hams, the largest taxpayer of Clayton county and one of the leading merchants of Jonesboro, W. W. Camp, one of the most prosperous and intelligent citizens in the county of Clayton, and Daniel P. Ferguson, a citizen of Jonesboro, who, with his wife, come from W. H. Crawford, Joseph Camp, C. B. Dean, J. W. Mann, T. B. Mullin, W. F. Archer, H. B. Thomas, W. H. Thompson, W. H. Thompson, J. E. Smith, W. R. Ward and A. N. Nisbet, all well worthy publication, are on file and only a portion of the affidavits.

JONESBORO, November 14, 1885.—J. J. Hams, deponent says that he has lived in this community eight years, and in the town for the last six years, and that he has suffered from that prohibition had injured the town of Jonesboro.

7. It was on the morning of the 25th of August, 1885, that the long felt want was eradicated.

What then followed was the movement of the information office at Brooksville, Florida, conducted by A. H. Behling & Co., for the benefit of those desiring to become aware of the many advantages and disadvantages presented to the uninitiated in anticipating the taking up of their abode in this American city. Thousands, yes thousands of letters have been mailed to the various postmasters and others making inquiries which were never answered, and are continuing to pour in daily to their great annoyance, which we propose cheerfully furnishing, accompanied by a handsome Florida curio for the paltry sum of one dollar. Had there been no such inquiry, doubtless there would have been countless hundreds of letters saved to the pockets of the unwary newcomers and capitalists. Therefore, take timely warning and communicate with
